INTRODUCTION

Rutgers presence on the World Wide Web is rapidly becoming one of the primary ways in which the University presents itself to both internal and external audiences. Given the growing importance of this medium, it has become essential to elaborate some principles to guide the creation of University Web sites.

Rutgers, while acknowledging the value in its diversity, is also committed to its existence and image as "one university." It is important that University Web pages, despite their diverse origins, clearly convey a relationship to the whole University. It is also important that such pages adhere to standards of quality and professionalism appropriate for an institution of higher education. Finally, attention to accessibility and user-friendliness are critical to effectively carrying out the University's missions. The following resources, requirements and recommendations are intended to promote those results.

RESOURCES

Rutgers Web Toolkit

To facilitate the creation of a consistent, professional appearance for core University sites, a set of templates and resources has been developed in the Rutgers Web Toolkit. It is strongly recommended that sites developed by administrative departments and offices use the templates in the development of their sites. Other units are also encouraged to use the templates, or derivations thereof, in their site design. Designs based on a common layout and style will present a stronger institutional image and will facilitate navigation and access to information. Assistance is available from the Department of University Relations to help departmental Web developers work with these templates.

Web-related Listservs

Two listservs have been created to facilitate communication about Web-related issues at Rutgers: Web_announce is vehicle for brief periodic announcements to all decision-makers, information providers, designers and programmers who are helping to create the Rutgers presence on the Web. Web_developers is intended for active discussion of Web design, programming and content development at Rutgers. Rutgers community members can subscribe to either list by sending a message to listserv@email.rutgers.edu with the words "subscribe web_announce" or "subscribe web_developers" in the body of the message.

REQUIREMENTS

The following guidelines apply to all Rutgers Web pages that are intended as official, public information about campuses, schools, departments, offices, programs and other units of the university, and that are linked from the main Web page. Personal pages and pages that are intended primarily for restricted, internal audiences are excluded from these requirements, however all pages and system use must conform to the Acceptable Use Policy for Computing and Information Technology Resources.

University Identification

The main page of each site must include clear identification of Rutgers, The State University. The preferred choice is to have the university logo on the page. In cases where the university logo conflicts with the design of the page, the inclusion of the name Rutgers, The State University is required.
